OCI NOMINATED FOR 2010 CSIA APEX AWARDS

Denver, Colorado - OCI announced today it has been nominated for the 2010 Colorado Software Industry Association's Apex Awards, the prestigious technology awards recognizing outstanding accomplishments and leadership by Colorado's advanced technology companies and professionals. The winners will be announced on July 15, 2010 at the 10th annual Apex Awards.

Since the program's inception in 2000, CSIA's Apex Awards have expressed well-deserved recognition for the numerous technology company success stories and technical advancements produced in Colorado. Presented in six categories for companies and five categories for professionals, the awards recognize success, innovation, vision, leadership, excellent customer support and community contributions.

"We are honored to be named a nominee for these prestigious awards that recognize technology product and service excellence," said Archie Anderson, President of OCI. "OCI is committed to providing the most efficient, quickest and low-cost data integration and software services for the businesses we serve. To be recognized among so many leading technology firms for our efforts is quite a privilege. "

"Colorado has many success stories, and it's important to recognize the companies and professionals that drive the Colorado technology industry," said Su Hawk, president, CSIA. "Our Apex Awards provide the industry a once-a-year opportunity to celebrate their success, and generate awareness around these notable companies, which include OCI."
